Grange Benefits Outlined At Two-Day Pomona Sessions Here

State Secretary Stanley Outlines Program for Local Granges — Meeting in True Gymnasium — Over 300 Registered for First Day Gathering—Reports of Committees and Plans for Year Announced.

Benefits of Pomona and Grange membership were outlined by State Secretary H. M. Stanley, Skaneteles, at the quarterly meeting of the Steuben Pomona held Wednesday and Thursday in the True gymnasium, this village. Over 300 delegates registered at the afternoon session on Wednesday. Local Grangers in charge of the program spent the last two days clearing the gymnasium in preparation for this event.

Good weather made the extraordinary attendance possible as the roads were good and the day clear. The Wednesday night session in the Grange rooms will be devoted to a short program by the local lecturer, Mrs. Sheldon Stewart and the exemplification of the fifth degree under the direction of Pomona Master George Andrus, Woodhull.

Mr. Stanley in his talk spoke of the benefits in inspiration, in education, in friendship and the economic benefits accruing from membership in the Grange. He told of some of the present activities being undertaken in Grange chapters for the members and the programs of the state and national groups.

He also predicted that the Grange would remain a great fraternity and a social organization for good. The Grange would continue activity in legislative programs of interest to farmers regardless of political parties.

The increasing interest in lecturer programs within the Grange were also commented upon as being a vital force for the building and growth of the Grange and for the retention of members through education.

He further spoke of the value of youth in the organization and building programs of interest to them, both from a social point of view and from an educational point of view so that young people would want to remain on the farms. He said "the Grange is not a protesting organization but is an organization for good in the community, for the good and benefit of the farmer and for the promotion of idealism."

The morning session opened at 10:30 o'clock with about 100 registered. Master Ralph Hand of the Addison Grange extended greetings from the local Grange and from the people of Addison to the visitors. Master George Andrus responded for the Pomona members thanking the local workers for the hospitality extended here.

A. K. Dennis gave a report of the Fire Relief Association stating that the surplus was large and the membership increasing. Frank H. Little, Addison Grange, spoke for the Farmers and Traders Life Insurance Company, telling of the growth of this purely Grange insurance fund.

Mrs. Byron Travis gave an account of the work of the service and hospitality committee and an outline of some of the projects being undertaken in various Granges.

Pomona Lecturer Mrs. Pauline Armstrong held a meeting of the Grange lecturers in the district during the noon recess at which time she outlined the program of peace which is being undertaken in the various Granges. A flag will make the rounds of the various chapters as part of this program.

A discussion during the afternoon on, "What I Expect of Pomona and What I Would Like to See Done" was led by Murray Thompson, Avoca. State Deputy Master Claire Arnburg, well known in Grange circles, was presented. He talked on local Grange affairs.

Considerable part of the late afternoon session was given over to a roll call of the Granges to determine the Granges represented and the number from each group. Mrs. Neola Chase, Bath, outlined what is being done with the revolv-

Hi-Lights and Shadows of the Week's News

The epidemic of strikes which has been spreading since the first of the year grows more serious from day to day. Although the General Motors strike was temporarily settled labor agitators have resorted to sit-down strikes in many parts of the country. New labor troubles have developed in the Detroit 5 and 10 cent stores, the Reading hosiery works and the steel works in Chicago. Biggest threat of the year hangs over the coal industry as the soft coal contract between workers and operators runs out this spring.

George Fearon attacked Governor Lehman's financing policy in a speech delivered in New York this week. The former Senator said we are no nearer the edge of the woods than we were five years ago, in spite of improvement in business. He deplored the rise in the budget and advocated the state adopt a pay-as-you-go plan.

An airliner crashed in Australia last week with two of the five persons it carried still alive. One of the victims was William Fountain of New York. The plane crashed in a heavy storm.

Dr. Francis Townsend has asked for a new trial on a charge of contempt of the House of Representatives. Convicted of the charge in federal court last week, the founder of the Townsend pension plan asserted the presiding judge erred in not permitting him to state the reasons he walked out of the House committee hearing, for which he was tried. Woodhull Home Gutted By Fire

Early Monday evening fire gutted the second story of the home of Mrs. Carrie Calkins in Woodhull.

The origin of the fire is not positively determined for when Mrs. Calkins discovered it the entire chamber was filled with smoke and one room was in flames, however it is supposed to have been caused by a broken lamp in the room occupied by Phillip Husted, who boarded at the Calkins home. He had gone to his room to light an oil stove, as was his custom during the cold weather and then returning down stairs until the room was heated. His absence longer than usual was noted by Mrs. Calkins, who went to acertain the cause and discovered the chamber on fire. She found Mr. Husted lying in his bed room doorway badly burned about the face and hands and overcome by the smoke. She heroically dragged him down the stairs to safety and then summoned help. Rensyler Calkins, a grandson, was the first to reach the home and found the broken lamp in Mr. Husted's room. The ceiling of the room directly below where the fire originated is oil soaked. Due to many helpers and an abundant water supply, the fire was extinguished but not before the whole chamber was burned, charred, and water soaked mass The first floor was damaged by water.

Mrs. Calkins was severely burned about the face and head. She also suffered from inhaling smoke.

Mr. Husted was removed to the office of Dr. F. D. MacDonald where he was given first aid. His death occurred about one o'clock A. M.

Insurance covers the household damage.

Soybean Expert Will Speak To Farmers and Advertising Club

March 18 Meeting of Club to Hear Talk on Soy-Bean Culture and Industry—Southern Tier Farmers to Be Guests of Club—Supper in the Addison High School — Report on Wednesday's Meeting in Baptist Church.

The Addison Advertising Club will sponsor a meeting of agriculturists of this vicinity at a supper meeting to be held in the Addison High School, Thursday night, March 17. Prof. R. G. Wiggans of Cornell University will be the speaker. This was made known at a meeting of the Ad Club held Wednesday noon in the Baptist Church. Ladies served.

The report on the proposed meeting was given by Maurice E. Miller, editor of this paper and chairman of the Industrial Committee for the club. The object of the proposed meeting is to enable farmers of this vicinity to have a greater cash crop to supplement their fast depleting milk income and incidentally to produce a product which can be used from the soil in industry.

Mr. Miller said, "It is necessary for us to aid the farmers of this vicinity in their agricultural plans. Soy Beans are coming to the front in industry. The oil may be used in paints and other products and the cake, which is left can be used as a food product for it has 37 per cent protein left while corn has only three or four per cent.

"And the more you raise of soy beans, the better it is for the land as it is a legumeneous crop and replaces valuable nitrates in the soil, and this is a most expensive fertilizer. We would like to get farmers around here to raise it as an experiment for one year.

"We have secured Prof. R. G. Wiggans, who spent 20 years developing the Cayuga soy bean, which can be grown in this vicinity at a 27 bushels to the acre crop. The Senior Class of the high school will prepare and serve the supper.

"Letters will be sent to some key farmers in Southern Steuben county to invite them as guests of the club." Ray Brown, president of the Addison National Bank stated he would like to have the men be guests of the Bank. This was voted. The members of the committee in charge have been assisted by Frank Finnerty of the High school agriculture department. Ken Armstrong and Frank Little.

Rev. J. Edward McKay, administrator of St. Catherine's Church was introduced as a guest. He

CHILD LABOR VERSUS "CHORES"

Once again the so-called Child Labor amendment is up for ratification in New York Assembly, and supporters of the measure are mustering the usual stock argument relied upon to bring it backing from well meaning citizens who are not too well informed of the latent dangers of this act.

No really decent person is in favor of exploiting the lives of little children in sweatshops. And the fact we all have abhorrence for exploitation of innocent, unformed lives and bodies, has been responsible for the headway this really pernicious amendment gained. The amendment sounds so innocuous many believe its only result would be the prevention of sweatshop labor for children. But actually the simple sounding little paragraph is charged with dynamite. It would enable Congress to pass legislation forbidding any Steuben County farmer from letting his 17-year-old, six-foot son from driving horses on the hay fork. It would open the way for Congress to say to any toil-laden mother of a family of many children, "you cannot allow your 17-year-old daughter to wipe the dishes."

Of course this amendment does not say these things in so many words, but it does give Congress the "power to limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age" and and if that is not about the broadest term man could conceive, what more could be added to it? Small wonder that prominent officials of the Catholic Church have voiced strong opposition to this plan, which holds a nicely concealed way for ending the age-old home unit of government, and making the intimate movements of every family subservient to some official in Washington.

Recent decisions by the Supreme Court have opened the way for practically eliminating child labor from American factories, where most people agree the real damage to youth is done. These decisions which, briefly stated, allow Congress to aid all states having child factory employment laws by preventing importation of manufactured articles through operation of interstate commerce statutes, can effectively accomplish all the good any constitutional amendment could do. By having all goods manufactured by child labor labeled as such, and forbidding entry of such articles in states having anti-child manufacturing laws, the abuse of child employment could be quickly ended. And no family would be prevented from allowing young people to do chores on the farm, in the home, or allowing boys or girls under 18 earning a little money during vacations.

We have had great illustrations during the NRA and AAA days, of Congress delegating power to individuals for abusive control of the lives and acts of persons in this great country. The amendment moves us a long way towards the conditions Russians find themselves in, as dictators herd children into communal buildings and the sacred unit of the family has been destroyed.

A circular put out some time ago by the New York Child Labor Committee, tells that 10,000 boys and girls under 15 were employed in certain communities of the state last summer. Study of the information by which this committee had arrived at their figures revealed the fact only about 983 out of the 10,000 publicized had actually been found to work in factories. The great majority of children working in vacation, by this committee's own figures, were caddying for golf, doing household chores, working on farms, selling magazine subscriptions and papers and engaged in other tasks which enabled them to earn a little pin money without injury to health or morals.

Do the people who advocate passage of this so-called child labor amendment, desire to stop every useful occupation for young peoples' hands? Do they wish to place stumbling blocks in the paths of young men and women laying up a few dollars towards their college education, some day in the future? Can they tell us just what kind of a generation we shall have when children are forebade all work until they are 18 years of age?

They cannot answer any of these questions, and if they try to they will tell us the amendment does not provide for these things happening. That is a half-truth, but the other half is, Congress would be empowered to bring all these things to pass. And how much dependence can the people place in a Congress like the one which for four years rubber-stamped the bills handed it by the President, who asked that all powers be placed in his hands?

Every father and mother should register their disapproval of this control-of-youth amendment now before the New York Assembly. It is a cunningly hidden method of removing authority from the home to the central government in Washington. Do you want some bureaucrat in Washington to tell you YOUR son cannot help milk the cows and YOUR daughter cannot help wash the dishes or wheel the baby? Then tell your assemblyman about it.

PARKING PROBLEMS

Last week an article in this paper drew attention to the critical need for better parking facilities in Addison. It is a real need, rendered none-the-less acute by the fact nearly every community is faced by this same wish for more room to park cars near the shopping area.

If we turn back the pages of memory some 30 years we can remember the telephone poles along Main street which provided "hitching" places for the horses that were tied along the curb in those days. When we recall the small number of poles that stood along the street and the small number of horses that were tied to them on an ordinary day one is given pause to wonder what the folks from out-of-town did with their vehicles when shopping. As a matter of fact the "parking" problem of this town 30 years ago was solved, as it is solved in the cities today, by parking areas devoted to that specific purpose.

They were called hitching stables in those days, and at the time mentioned no less than three were flourishing in Addison. Clark Baxter did a fine business with his "farmers' sheds" situated on what is now the approach to the Addison High School building. Large numbers of horses were cared for each day in the large barns operated in connection with the old Commercial House and the Eagle Hotel, while the livery barns of the late Arthur Hill accommodated still others. Nearly all farmers who came into Addison to shop in those days, especially in cool weather, expected to stable their horses at one of these barns. They paid from ten cents to a quarter for the privilege and whatever refreshments the animals ate, and when shopping was finished either carried their bundles to the sheds or drove up in front of one of the stores to load up the wagon with purchased supplies. There was no parking problem in those days, because the privilege was paid for, as it usually is today when one parks his auto in a busy city.

Today there is not a paid hitching stable in Addison, because there is no demand for one, and naturally the new fangled vehicles of 1937 more than exhaust parking space along Main street. Apparently there is only one cure for this difficulty — the establishment of a parking area near the business center of the village where shoppers may leave their cars conveniently. Fortunately this acute problem can be solved. There is an ample space lately opened up close to the business section, which could be utilized for a public parking area. Addison business men should take steps to obtain the use of this area and convert it into a fine parking place which could become a great credit to this village. By doing so they will be serving their old customers and draw new shoppers to the village, shoppers who find parking in city business sections more prohibitive than they do here.

Here on the one side is a community need, and on the other a civic solution. Shall the idea take root in action, or die of inertia?

FIFTY YEARS

It has been said many times before that 50 years is a long time to look ahead to, but a short time to look back. And it is probable Sidney D. MacDowell would reflect that statement if he took time off Monday for retrospection. For when Mr. MacDowell opened his furniture store fifty years ago, March 1, 1937 was a remote date in the dim and distant future, and almost anything can happen in half a century.

And many things have happened while Mr. MacDowell has been in business in Addison. Horses and wagons, or sleighs were the fastest means of transportation around the town in 1887, while today the MacDowell business is completely motorized and an ox team in front of the store would cause nearly as much sensation as an auto would have in 1900. Time has flown, lately on wings, and changes have fallen on every side, still MacDowell's continue as the Addison furniture and undertaking house quite as it was fifty years ago. The business has grown, of course. From a one-room store it has slowly but steadily increased until adjoining property has been absorbed by the business and another building has been constructed to house the large stock.

For any man to stay in business through the depressions and misfortunes of fifty years is in itself something of an accomplishment—to make that business a growing and successful one is an achievement. Faces have come to Main street and old, familiar faces have often been missed from it while Mr. MacDowell has continued year after year to finally become the dean of Addison business figures. Former residents coming back here to visit may look in vain for this or that old acquaintance, but when they scan the street they can get a thrill to find MacDowell's still in the same old location.

So the Advertiser says to Mr. MacDowell, "Greetings! Congratulations on a long, successful business career. May the future years continue to roll off your shoulders lightly, as in the past."

Pension Safeguard for Justices Not Related to President's Plan

By MARK SULLIVAN

THE Senate is discussing a bill having to do with retirement of Supreme Court justices. Because the bill has to do with this subject, it is going to be misinterpreted. It is going to be misinterpreted as having a relation to the President's plan for appointing six new justices of the Supreme Court.

For the sake of clarity it is most necessary that the public should understand that there is no relation whatever between the bill now under discussion by the Senate and the President's plan. The two are as different as voluntary is different from compulsory, and that is about all the difference in the world. Between the two there is no faintest relation whatever except coincidence in time.

Nevertheless, later on, this coincidence in time is going to have a material effect on the course of events. After the bill now in the Senate has been enacted, as it probably will be, the President's proposal will have a different status and will look different to the country.

A good way to achieve clarity is to tell briefly the history of the bill now in the Senate.

For many years, ever since 1869, there has been a law providing that if a Supreme Court Justice is more than seventy and has served ten years, he can resign and receive full pay for life. Under this law the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes resigned in 1932 and for a time received full pay, which was $20,000 a year. In 1933, however, Congress passed the emergency "economy act," which provides that no pension should be more than $10,000 a year. Justice Holmes's pension was thereupon reduced to that amount so long as the economy act was in effect.

It was felt that this should not be; that a justice who resigns expecting full pay should not later find his pension reduced to half. It was felt that justices (more than seventy and having served ten years) who leave the bench should be guaranteed full pay for life, without risk of having the amount reduced by some future Congress. To achieve this a bill was very carefully written. It is the same bill that is now in the Senate. It was first introduced about two years ago. It was introduced merely because it was believed to be a good measure.

When the bill was before Congress two years ago it was defeated (on March 6, 1935.) It was defeated, to some extent, by a sense of delicacy—possibly unnecessary delicacy—on the part of members of Congress. It was defeated because many members felt that the passage of such an act might be construed as a kind of hint to certain elderly justices that they should retire. This argument against the bill did not appear in the debates, but it was spoken of quietly among members, and it was strong enough to defeat the measure. The argument was, as Republican Congressman Michener says, "whispered"—the word whisper being used not in an odious sense but in the sense of practicing quiet delicacy. Congressmen felt that passing the bill would seem like saying to the elderly justices, "Must you go? Here's your hat; don't forget your cane."

(Observe, by the way, that Congress two years ago was unwilling to do quietly, by hint, what President Roosevelt today publicly demands shall be done by coercion. From this, can there be any doubt that Congress, if left to itself, if not under pressure from the President, would never pass the President's proposal?)

Although the bill giving justices the privilege of voluntarily retiring at full pay was defeated two years ago, it was reintroduced early in the present Congress. It was reintroduced in complete good faith, in the conviction that it was a good thing to do. It was reintroduced wholly without regard to the President's proposal and weeks before the President made his proposal. It was reintroduced by the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Mr. Sumners, of Texas, a Congressman highly respected by his fellow members and utterly free from suspicion of deviousness.

The bill was sent to the House Committee on Judiciary. It was in that committee, following the normal routine, when, on February 5, the President made his sensational proposal for what amounted to compulsory retirement of justices over seventy. Because of the coincidence, the voluntary retirement bill fell under suspicion. The suspicion was unfounded. Of the voluntary bill, it is true to say, in the words of Congressman Celler, of New York, that it is "simply an optional retirement bill; there is no coercion; there is no compulsion about it; there is no attempt to bludgeon or blackjack the judges into retirement; they can take it or leave it; there is no hidden trick in this bill; we have employed no hidden strategy; it is a clear-cut measure; there is no deliberate attempt to 'put over' anything."

That Better 'Ole

By WALTER LIPPMANN

The next Senator who hears Mr. Roosevelt say "Find me a better 'ole" might remind him that the poor devils in Barnfather's famous cartoon got into their hole because they could not help it, but that Mr. Roosevelt went out into no-man's land because he did not look where he was going. He is, however, describing his position correctly. He is in a hole in a no-man's land where no other President has ever been before.

He got there by losing touch with his own followers and imagining he could rout all opposition forever by exploding one big bomb all by himself. The effect of the explosion has been to reveal to an astonished world the deep divisions in his own following. It has disclosed the sharp difference between the seasoned progressives and the old-line Democrats on the one hand and Mr. Roosevelt's personal faction on the other.

With the exception only of Senator La Follette, the recognized leaders of American progressivism are opposed to his scheme. As for the old-line Democrats, the position of those who feel compelled to support it is pitiable. Senator Ashurst has had to take a most spectacular beating after being confronted with his indignant denial that Mr. Roosevelt intended to pack the court. But the position of a man like Senator Robinson is really worse. Six months ago he would have been speechless with rage if any one had told him he was going to be remembered in American history as the man who tried to push through the Senate a measure to drive six justices, including the Chief Justice of the United States, off the Supreme Court bench. And can any one who knows Senator Pat Harrison or Senator Byrnes or Senator Key Pittman imagine them participating in this coup, except under the direst compulsion of party regularity? Why, even General Johnson, who was the first to acclaim it as masterly, has now seen what it is all about, and has been writing reminiscently about the dangers of being too smart.

Much the most significant thing that has come to light is the deep difference between normal progressivism and Mr. Roosevelt's emergency progressivism. The objects are much the same; indeed there are only a few items in the New Deal program that any man of liberal temper and progressive purposes does not approve. There is no quarrel, and never has been any, among liberals and progressives about the essential principles and professed purposes of the monetary and banking policy, the agricultural program for the emergency, the conservation program, the attack on farm tenancy, the slum clearance, collective bargaining, pump priming, public work rather than the cash dole, social security, the regulation of the capital market, the regulation of public utilities, the experiment of T. V. A., or even on the application of N. R. A. principles to demoralized industries like coal mining. There have been differences about ways and means, about the size of the expenditures, about the quality of the administrative acts, about the temper and spirit when it has been reckless and terroristic. But except for the N. R. A. in its wholesale application, which has seemed to genuine liberals a most reactionary move toward monopoly, the New Deal objectives and program have had liberal and progressive support.

But the real difference which has separated some liberals from Mr. Roosevelt earlier, and most of them now, is that Mr. Roosevelt has gradually ceased to think of himself as a servant of the democracy and has begun to think of himself as a man designated to impose and provide the desirable reforms. Mr. Arthur Krock of "The New York Times" reports, no doubt accurately, that the President is telling his dismayed followers that the charges about repudiating the platform and acting in bad faith will not impress the people because they put such trust in him personally. But that is what all the undemocratic leaders believe; they are all convinced that the people will follow them, and that the rules of democracy have been suspended for their benefit.

But true progressives do not believe that, and that is the reason why men who upheld the progressive cause when Franklin Roosevelt was still making up to Tammany Hall in New York politics are opposing him now. They recognize in this scheme to capture the Supreme Court the unmistakable marks of that personal government which is wholly incompatible with democracy.

Such resistance as he has encountered appears only when a people is deeply moved. There is no use trying to laugh it off as if it were a manufactured opposition like that which was organized against the utilities bill. This is the real thing, and there has been nothing like it in America since President Wilson sought to make the American people underwrite the Versailles Treaty. The outcry which has gone up comes from a profound and instinctive revulsion against so brutal a break with the whole American political tradition. In 1920 the people would not give up what they believed was their historic security, and in 1937 they will no less certainly refuse to give up the security which they obtain from an independent judiciary. On that their conviction will become adamant, however much they may deplore certain decisions of the court.

It is vain for any politician to imagine that he can prevail against a popular conviction of this sort. Mr. Roosevelt is a popular man and a skillful leader. But in 1918 Woodrow Wilson was more popular than any human being has ever been while he walked the earth. Yet when he challenged the instinctive conviction of the American people he was broken and within two years his party was in ruins and his cause repudiated.

If Mr. Roosevelt really understands the American people, this is the critical moment in his career to make use of his knowledge. His job is to retreat as gracefully as he can, for the sooner he gets out of the hole he has digged for himself the better for him and his party and his cause.

Deliberation Versus "Rush and Jam"

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman Sentinels of the Republic

Probably the most widespread criticism of Congress during the past few years has been based on the eagerness of its members to speed new and unfamiliar measures through the legislative mill.

"Rush and jam" has too frequently been the method instead of careful study and consideration of all bills which influence the public welfare.

During recent weeks, however, Congress appears to have shown a different attitude. Measures affecting fundamental principles of our government are being subjected to scrutiny and study by various Senators and Representatives who have not hesitated to express either approval or disapproval — and the reasons therefor.

Many have thus reasserted their right to express their own opinions and the opinions of the men and women they represent, regardless of party affiliations.

To all citizens who regard members of both House and Senate as their representatives at Washington, this evidence of politically independent judgment is encouraging. To all Americans it means a stronger voice in government.

Rushing a measure through Congress gives the people little opportunity to understand its purport and effect, or to let their will be known.

Reasonable study and discussion, in contrast, clarifies the issues involved—not only to members of the Congress, but to the people as well.

After all, it is we, the people, for whom government is organized, and who are helped or injured by its actions. It is we, the people, who bear its burdens and pay its bills. It is to us that our elected officials must answer. And Congress should realize that it will rise in public esteem to the extent that it recognizes these facts and lets us know just what our government is planning to do.

Press to Furnish Bills of Interest To County Residents

Albany—Through efforts of Assemblyman Guy W. Cheney and William M. Stuart, residents of Steuben County will be able to follow the daily activities of the New York State Legislature now in session.

With cooperation of the county clerk at Bath, the city clerk at Corning and the Hornell Public Library the assemblymen are arranging for a file of bills as the measures are introduced in the legislature.

As each measure comes off the press copies will be mailed to the heretofore mentioned public servants. They have willingly consented to assist.

The assemblymen point out that this will enable Steuben residents to make a first hand reading of bills that interest them. These files will be kept up to date and the public is invited to inspect them.

Aside from this the two Steuben assemblymen took active part in the legislature this week. Both were busy with committee meetings and appearing in support of their measures now before the legislature.

Assemblyman Cheney's four-payment state aid plan passed the assembly early in the week. The bill, which he said would save "about $400,000 annually for taxpayers," is now before the senate. He has been in conference with senate leaders no the measure.

Assemblyman Stuart's bill make it mandatory for the state to pay taxes on owned lands in Steuben also passed the assembly and is now before the senate. Late this week he was presenting the merits of the measure to senate leaders.

Both assemblymen are actively opposed to the child labor amendment which is expected to reach a vote in the assembly shortly.

Assemblyman Stuart introduced a measure this week creating a maximum—double the present minimum—of signers on designating petitions which rae circulated by aspiring candidates for public office.

Farm Week Draws More Than 11,000

Aided by "perfect" weather, Cornell's Farm and Home Week shattered all attendance records in the thirty years that the event has been held. The former high mark of 8,006, established in 1935, was bettered by more than 3,000 this year.

A total of 11,142 persons registered during the week, and, as is true each year, hundreds failed to register but went directly to meetings and events in which they were interested. Registration is voluntary.

Exceptionally fine weather is given as the main reason for the record attendance by Professor Ralph Wheeler who has been in charge of the program since 1910. Another is the better economic condition of the farmer; and the third is the farmer's desire to know more about his business, as shown by heavy attendances at specialized lectures this year. Also, says Professor Wheeler, this year's program was one of the best ever offered, with persons prominent both in agriculture and home economics featured. Another reason for good attendance was the support given by newspapers which printed many announcements of the event, and gave the people of the State a knowledge of the program.

Visitors called for more than 42,000 bulletins during the week. Bulletins most in demand were those on homemaking, soils and crops, farm management, farm engineering and animal husbandry.

FRUIT, FLOWERS AND GARDEN

Shrubs for the Garden

A. M. S. Pirdham

Flowers and plants have a definite part in home life. Memories of childrood are often associated with the trees and shrubs of the home garden or the neighboring park. Now, as homemakers, interest in plants continues, and many leisure hours are passed in the garden.

The beginner is most interested in plants that grow with relatively little care and which, at the same time, are attractive in flower or in fruit. About a dozen shrubs form the background of many garden plantings.

Forsythia is one of the first to flower in the spring, and makes a gorgeous display of showy yellow bloom on long graceful stems. This is followed by Spirea Van Houtte, often called bridal wreath. Later, bush honeysuckle, snowball, mock orange, lilacs and yellow rose add their share to late spring blooms.

During August, hills of snow hydrangea blossoms and the honeysuckle bush is bright with red berries. In September and October, and throughout the winter, snow berry, coral berry, barberry and privet all have interest.

These "A B C "shrubs are used in almost every conceivable way. Each is often used and is attractive as an individual plant. The same shrubs make attractive group plantings, provide walls for the outdoor living room, screen the neighbor's garage, and mark the boundary of the property.

JANUARY WARM MONTH

Daily temperatures during January averaged eight and two-tenths degrees above normal; this has been exceeded only three times since 1890, namely in 1913, 1932 and 1933, according to a general summary of weather conditions by the weather bureau maintained at Cornell by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Precipitation was the heaviest in January since records began in 1890, the report says. It averaged 164 per cent of the normal amount, and was fairly well distributed over the state.

As a result of warm weather and heavy precipitation, streams, wells and springs were brought back to normal.

CCC Activities

The Addison CCC basketeers journeyed to Hornell on February 25th for a basketball game with the Almond Camp and came back on the short end of a 36-29 score. This was the first of the play-off series among the teams of Cohocton, Almond and Addison.

Almond showed a burst of speed in the latter stages of the game in Hornell that Addison couldn't match. Late in the third quarter Addison held what should have been a comfortable lead. At that point Addison led 29-21. It was here that Burke, the local camp's center, was injured and time was called. After the resumption of play, Addison was never the same. Almond proceeded to cut away the eight point lead and get themselves enough points to win handily.

Almond started the game off fast and piled up a good lead. But the local tossers closed the gap materially as Almond led 19-18 at half time.

The Addison team did not play its usual brand of basketball. While on the other hand Almond was much faster and were quite accurate on their outside shots.

The Rev. Father T. A. Withey of the Addison Episcopal Church gave a very interesting talk on his world war experiences at the camp night meeting on Wednesday, February 24th. Father Withey's army experiences makes him well qualified to speak to such a group of young men.

Dr. Stiker, the Addison dentist and a captain in the Medical Reserve Corps, presented an unusual movie on Friday night, February, 26, to the entire company. The picture gave in detail a description of the diligent work done by the medical corps in emergencies.

The educational department of the camp will invite from time to time speakers to come out and tell of their experiences, and speak on their specialities or other interests which may be enlightening.

Assemblyman Asks Milk Advertising Fund Be Restored

Albany, Feb. 22 — Assemblyman Fred S. Hollowell, Republican, of Yates, has issued a call to his colleagues in the Legislature detailing the reasons why the state milk advertising campaign should be restored to its previous level.

"Contrary to a mistaken idea, the State does not pay this bill", he said. "The milk industry pays it. The state merely underwrites the cost and is reimbursed by the industry. The cost is divided between milk producers, on one hand, and milk distributors, on the other hand.

"This cost is extremely small, almost insignificant. On the basis of the 1935 campaign, the industry reimbursed the State at the rate of one cent per hundred pounds of fluid milk and cream. As there are 47 quarts of milk in 100 pounds, the cost therefore was 1/47 of a cent for each quart sold. Divide this between producers and distributors and you find that each paid the trifling sum of 1/94 of a cent to advertise this valuable food from which dairymen derive their principal income.

"The investment pays a fine dividend to the industry without raising the price to the consumer. Last year for every 25c a month the producer invested in advertising he received a return many times greater.

"In spite of enormous gains in milk consumption due largely to advertising, the appropriation was reduced last year. The result shortened the campaign and thus denied producers the benefit of advertising when its stimulating help was most needed. By restoring the appropriation to its previous level dairymen will be protected against this faulty situation.

"I have introduced a bill in the Legislature providing for a return to the former basis. As a milk producer myself, I am urging my colleagues to help enact this legislation which I believe to be so helpful to the industry. Also I direct their attention to the fact that the State Grange, largest of the farm organizations, is on unanimous record as favoring milk advertising, as are many others."

Patronage Handouts Awaiting Senatorial Court Action

National New Deal Chairman Jim Farley has been slow to pass out the 1937 portion of patronage. His recent "testimonial" dinner in Washington gave him an opportunity tactfully to make clear the reasons for the delay.

In response to anxious inquiries, genial Jim let the impression fall that no important political jobs would be distributed until he and the President had scanned the votes of Congressmen and Senators on the "pack the Supreme Court" proposal.

The Farley "testimonial" banquet was just another occasion to make clear what members of Congress already knew—that no spoils will go to those who do not help the President come out victor in his fight for a Supreme Court shake-up.

Critics of the President's plan are more vitriolic than ever. They say it was bad enough for the Administration to ask Congress to change the American form of government without putting the question to a vote of the people. But it is a thousand times worse, they argue, for the New Dealers to exert patronage pressure in such a way as to force ambitious Congressmen to sell out their own consciences, as well as their constituents.

Said one New Deal congressman, "This is one time I wanted to cast my vote in accordance with my conscience. But I can't do that without jeopardizing my political career. Career or conscience—that's an unfair choice to put before any man."

Soil Conservation Plans Will Be Announced Soon

A cooperative association of farmers in Steuben County will supervise the soil conservation program according to plans made at a meeting of directors held in Bath Saturday. The meeting was of directors chosen from local meetings last week. Twelve directors, three chosen from each of the four parts of the county comprise the governing body. They in turn chose three members of an executive committee who will administer the funds and plans in Steuben County.

The members of the executive committee are: Claire Arnburg, president Griff W. Jack, vice president; and Carl Wellington. Lynn Bookout, soil conservation agent for the county acted as secretary for the committee and will continue in this capacity. Owing to the work of this committee the men will be recompensed for their work. It will be their idea to cut down the administrative costs for soil conservation in this county. Steuben costs were lower pro rata than many other sections of the state.

A budget of expenses was presented and a schedule of practices will be prepared. Farmers planning to get into the soil conservation program will be given the data at township meetings planned for the near future.

Farmers are urged to get in touch with reliable seed firms and to place orders early for forage and field crop seeds.

"As one woman said to another, men folks insist on all kinds of modern office and shop equipment to save them time and work. And I'll bet things would be different if they had our jobs for awhile.

"For one thing, they'd have an automatic ELECTRIC water heater instead of unreliable and wasteful furnace coils or jack stoves. You can just bet they wouldn't put up with running down cellar steps every time they wanted hot water; or standing around waiting for water to get hot when the week's wash stared them in the face!"

Every woman deserves and every family can afford the convenience of automatic ELECTRIC water heating. Find out from your dealer or us how a small deposit and a few dollars a month will pay for it and how inexpensive it is under our low rate.

Junior Scout Leaders Meet at CCC Saturday

Coincident with the beginning of the eleventh Annual Training Institute for Steuben Boy Scout Leaders announcement was made of a series of Saturday Training sessions for Patrol Leaders with their Scoutmasters. These programs, which are designed to assist the Scoutmaster with the Training of his Junior Staff—Patrol Leaders, Senior Patrol Leaders, and Scribes—will be under the personal direction of Mr. H. G. (Skipper) Horton of Pulteney. Mr. Horton served for 18 years as local and National Boy Scout Executive. He is an expert in camping and training.

All Troops of the Steuben Area have been invited to send their Patrol Leaders to the Addison CCC Camps for the Saturday session.

The assembly will begin at 10 o'clock in the morning, then follows some special instructions in out of door Crafts. This program will occupy the Troop representatives until noon meal. The noon meal will be prepared by the group out of doors. All equipment and food will be provided. There is a fee of 25 cents to cover supplies.

Through the cooperation of the District Headquarters of the Civilian Conservation Corp each of the Camp Commanders has invited the group to remain for the Saturday evening meal. The Scouts will be given an opportunity to inspect the Camp and to learn something of its program.

Instructions concerning the program have been sent to each Scoutmaster in the Area. According to these instrucions, definite reservations are required for all who plan to attend. The reservations may be sent to either Scout Office—Court House, Hornell or Court, House, Corning. Additional information is available from District Scout Commissioner, L. E. Wade of Painted Post.

The Madam Bats Zero

During the campaign, Mr. Roosevelt hit upon a clever technique when he stated the fiscal condition of the country in terms of baseball "box score". He little imagined at that time that an application of this device would return to plague the member of his cabinet who can least stand further heckling at this time—Madam Secretary Perkins.

It is generally agreed that the General Motors strike was settled in spite of, rather than because of, the peace overtures of Madam Perkins. No sooner was the settlement sealed than Washington wits began to figure up the Labor Secretary's "box score". Pro-New Dealers tried their best to arrive at a different result. But no matter how one figured it, the Madam's score read: Three times at bat; three strikeouts. Percentage .000.

ing student fund. This is a fund maintained by the county from which students planning to enter school may borrow.

The last event on the afternoon program was a comedy play given by the Members of the Canisteo Grange. This was a fitting ending to an afternoon of business for the delegates had had a day of reports and speeches.

Delegates to the convention were given their dinner by the Women's Auxiliary of the Chapel of the Redeemer. The Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist Church served supper to 78 delegates in the church parlors Wednesday night and Thursday they will be guests of the Baptis women for the noon luncheon.

The Thursday sessions will begin at 10 o'clock. Many of the delegates remained in this village or vicinity over night taking advantages homes which had been offered to the local Grange for housing the delegates.

Rural electrification and the farm outlook for this year will mark the chief items of discussion this (Thursday) morning. Richard Stowell, Lindley Grange, will be in change of the discussion on the last named topic.

The chief item on the afternoon program will be a talk by William Stempfle, county farm bureau agent, on "soil conservation". This will outline local and national work being undertaken for flood and soil control. The Rev. Garland G. Lacey of the local Methodist church will speak on "Canada and Canadians."

Addison Aggies Defeat Arkport Champions

The Addison Aggies defeated the Arkport Aggies on the Arkport court Friday night by a 17-12 score.

The Arkport Aggies, who are champions of the Allegany County Future Farmers League, gave the locals one of their hardest games of the year. The "box" court hampered the locals' play as they were constantly going out of bounds or hitting the low ceiling with ordinary shots.

The home team led at the end of the first half, but Addison tied it up on the first play of the second half and went into the lead soon after, never to be headed.

Oakden and Phillips starred on offense for the locals while Johnson was the main stay on defense.

Future Farmers Win Opener In League Finals

The Addison Aggies annexed the first game of the county Future Farmers basketball league play-off on Monday night when they defeated the "Grape Growers" from Hammondsport on the latter's court by a 16-3 score.

The home team striving to end the long league string of victories of the Addison team rushed the ball from the first toss-up until the end of the game. Personal contact marred the game throughout, 22 fouls being called on both teams.

Addison served first as Oakden went in for a beautiful cripple. A moment later Phillips made good on a free toss. Wheaton went through on a signal play to make the score 5-0 in the local Aggies favor and Hammondsport called time out. Bannach scored on a steve for the home team and Longwell came through with a foul. Oakden again came through with a cripple and a moment later sank a foul to make the score 8-3 as the half ended.

Hammondsport pressed close in the third quarter getting points on baskets by Sprague and Bannach and a foul by the latter. Long went in for a cripple for the visitors. Phillips added a foul and a moment later Oakden dropped in another foul.

The home team was held scoreless during the last quarter while Addison scored on fouls by Long and a cripple by Johnson.

Baptist Brake Drum Chimes To Be on NBC Mar. 21

The chimes of the Baptist Church will be heard over the Blue network of the National Broadcasting Company, Sunday night, March 21. They will be part of the "We The People" program sponsored by a baking powder company under the direction of Phillips Lord. And the chimes will be played in the studio by their co-creator the Rev. Kenneth E. Arnold, pastor of the Addison Baptist Church. The broadcast is from 5 to 5:30 o'clock.

Negotiations for the playing of the unique brake drum chimes started seven weeks ago and through correspondence, arrangements were completed last week. The sponsors of the program will pay all expenses of dismantling the chimes, which have been in the tower of the local church, shipping them to New York and return and the Rev. and Mrs. Arnold's expenses while in New York from Friday afternoon, March 19 to Sunday night, March 21, the night of the broadcast.

The history of these brake drum chimes is well known to Addisonites since their creation in 1935 and a great deal of national publicity has accrued to Addison and to the Rev. Arnold and his father-in-law, creators of the carillon.

The chimes and frame are to be sent to New York by express and the Rev. Arnold will set them up in the Radio City studios from which the broadcast will emanate. Details of the Broadcast will be worked out when the Rev. Arnold arrives in New York.

Rehearsals will be held in the studios Saturday and Sunday afternoons, March 20 and 21 prior to the evening broadcast. R. Clifford Fowler, arranger for Mr. Lord, stated in one of his letters to the Rev. Arnold, that this "would be one of the most unusual ideas broadcast on the program". The Rev. Arnold will play, "The Old Rugged Cross". The Rev. George Arnold will officiate here March 21.

Congessman Cole Says Party Lines May Now Be Split in House

Washington, March 3—W. Sterling Cole of Bath, representative in Congress from the 37th New York District, believes that the break in party lines on the vote for the Supreme Court justices' retirement bill, just signed by the President, indicates an improved Congressional lineup that may have marked effect upon the President's proposal to "pack" the Supreme Court. He approved the measure to provide a pension for justices desiring to retire, despite the fact it was of Democratic origin, and says that unless Republicans are prepared to support measures of merit originating in the White House they cannot expect Democrats to oppose bills detrimental to public interests.

Mr. Cole outlines his views on the retirement bill, the proposal to control the Supreme Court, and other matters in the following statement:

Within the past fortnight the House of Representatives has, for the first time in my experience, given evidence of legislating in an intelligent manner. Heretofore, under the spell of Executive dominance, the House has combined in one measure proposals of the President, some of which were desirable and some highly objectionable. It has been the policy of the minority party that since the objectionable features greatly overbalanced the meritorious provisions, no alternative was left the minority but to oppose the entire measure.

Then came the famed message of the President concerning the Federal judiciary and notably the Supreme Court, accompanied by a draft of the bill containing the provisions he recommended. The message contained some very laudable suggestions having to do with expedition of justice in the lower courts and also favorably commented on a measure then pending in the House which would permit Supreme Court Justices to retire at the age of seventy although retirement was not made mandatory.

For several years judges of the lower courts have enjoyed the privilege of retirement on attaining the age of seventy years, a privilege denied the Supreme Court. These latter justices were permitted to resign from the Court, but in that event their salary was subject to alteration by the Congress, and, in fact, the salary of one of the most prominent and loved justices. Oliver W. Holmes, was reduced by Congress after his resignation. To correct this injustice and discrepancy betyeen rights of the lower court judges and those of the Supreme Court, this measure was proposed in Congress two years ago and had been reported favorably by the House judiciary committee, both Republicans and Democrats, prior to the advent of the President's message on the Courts.

Instead of withholding the measures and embodying its provisions in one bill containing all the President's mandates, the Judiciary Committee brought out the bill it had recommended. Not a single voice against the bill itself was raised in the House at the time it was under debate; all subscribed to its fairness and it was passed by an overwhelming majority, including both Democrats and Republicans who are determindely opposed to the President's proposal to enlarge the Supreme Court in order that a more favorable determination of New Deal legislation might be obtained.

I was numbered among those Republicans affirmatively supporting the measure. We have long been complaining that the Administration had embodied in one measure provisions that were both good and bad. This, at last, was an occasion when the good was singled out and placed in one measure. Not yet has my partisanship grown to the extent of opposing everything that is offered simply because the President has affixed his stamp of approval to it. Furthermore, we cannot hope to defeat the President's greater purpose of "packing the court" if, with our blind opposition to everything of conequence that is presented by the Administration, we alienate those Democratic members who oppose this sinister scheme.

This independent action of the House in dividing the Executive recommendations into separate proposals and offering them individually to the House for decision is a very wholesome improvement in the recent methods of legislation and let us hope that it will continue, to the end that sound and progressive laws may be enacted.

Truly Rural Town Has Less Than Addison

Stansted (Kent England) is only 23 miles from London, yet it has—

No gas
No electricity.
No bus service
No village hall.
No village constable.
No taxi.

It is nearly two miles to the nearest bus route, and if any of its 400-odd residents want to hire a car they have to telephone to Worthah, 3½ miles away.

A few of the larger houses have their own plants for making electricity, but oil lamps are the chief means of illumination.

Stansted has only one shop. A post office is attached but money orders have to be obtained at Fairseat post office, 1½ miles from the center of the village.

Dances are seldom held in the village.

Most of the young men have motorcycles, and go to neighboring villages for their entertainment.

The parish church dates back to the thirteenth century, and in the churchyard is a yew tree believed to be more than 1,000 years old.

"PARTNERSHIPS," says William L. Teach, in American Druggist, "are seldom happy and successful. My observation is that, even with a partnership set-up that is fundamentally ideal, eventually the time will come when one partner will become dissatisfied with the other, or each with the other.

"Partnerships are hazardous because rarely is there a perfect balance of ability, enthusiasm and energy. It usually develops that one partner becomes the leader, does most of the constructive work, and builds up a personal following. And yet, no matter how much out of balance a partnership may be, each has his own idea of his own comparative value to the business and the other's failings. This is human nature."

A sole owner has no one to blame for failure but himself. Similarly, if he is successful, he doesn't have to share profits or other victory spoils with another party.

WHAT do you know about sugar? Sugar cane is raised chiefly in Cuba, Porto Rico, Louisiana, Hawaii, Philippine Islands, Java and India. Its stalk grows 1 to 2 inches thick and is made up of short, jointed sections much like Tim Todd's fish pole.

Pressing the green or gray juice out of the cane is manufacturing operation number one. Almost all sugar cane grown in the United States is produced and refined in Louisiana.

It is believed cane sugar originated in India in early times. Arabs carried the cane to Egypt and Southern Europe during the Middle Ages. It was introduced into Louisiana in 1751. The year 1792 saw our first refined product.

BRASS TACKS
For POULTRY RAISERS
By BURTON P. THARP

It was in the fifth grade that we became decimal point conseious. We have been wrestling with that insignificant little so and so ever since. Move to the right in a given number and we have more. Move it to the left and we have less. We suspect, however that this is not always true. For instance, we had $1.00. The Government moved to left—at least that is what we understand. Presto! We have $ .59. Now you try it.

Fortunately poultry bookkeeping is less involved and we were able to ascertain where a flock owner stood at the close of January with a flock of 100 birds which produced at 60 percent throughout the month. Feed bills at present prices make us sit down and think twice. The Government is handing eggs out as surplus. The price of eggs was 30 cents, sold locally.

The basis for the figures was the literature of a well-known commercial feed manufacturer. Incidentally the figures given by the manufacturer have proved to be accurate by actual tests in small flocks. The January prices of the feed in 100 pound lots have been used in figuring the costs. Actual prices of the feed are omitted for obvious reasons. It is not the object of this article to compare brands and prices nor to recommendany particular feed.

Both mash and grain were used. The cost of feeding 100 laying hens was $10.39 for the mash and $7.75 for the scratch feed. The estimated cost of grit, oyster shell, litter, etc. was $200. The total cost of producing the 155 dozen eggs laid during the period was $20.14 for the items listed.

Of course not all the eggs were saleable but the poor ones were used at home and saved buying 30 cent eggs for family use. They are therefore used in our estimate. The value of the months production was $36.50. This leaves $16.36 to pay for the labor involved in caring for the flock. For the average small flock owner this should mean about 40 cents per hour for the labor with nothing left for profit. Fortunately this time would bring little or no income, as a rule.

It is interesting to note that the actual feed cost of a dozen eggs was 13 and one-half cents. An increase in the egg production from 60 to 70 percent would have meant about $8.00 more income for the month.

There are so many other factors in the raising and keeping of poultry which are difficult to estimate by the month that it is not advisabl to place too much emphasis on the monthly estimate although it has its use.

How, What and Why

This paper has arranged with the Office of information of the New York State college of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Trouble With House Plants

Miss H. E. H., asks: "Will you please tell me what ails my house plants? I enclose a leaf from one plant."

Dr. P. P. Pirone of the plant pathology department replies: "I have examined the geranium leaf you sent and find it is affected with two distinct troubles.

"The large burned areas appear to be caused either by some fertilizer added in larger amounts than necessary or by escaping gas in the home.

"The other trouble is the small, rough raised spots on the lower leaf surface, known to us as Oedema. This trouble is common on geranium at this time of year and occur when the plant does not get enough sunlight and when too much water is applied."

Buildings for Beef Herd

H. J., asks: "What type of buildings are most desirable for a beef-breeding herd?"

Professor R. B. Hinman of the department of animal husbandry answers: "Basically, all these buildings need to do is to serve as a protection against cold wind and driving storms. Beef cattle enjoy quite cold air.

"When the thermometer has registered twenty-five degrees below zero at Ithaca, beef-breeding cows have been known to lie down outside and chew their cuds, even though well-bedded sheds were available if they chose to use them.

"One of the best buildings for wintering beef-breeding cows I have ever seen consisted of six upright discarded telephone poles, with other poles mortised on top. Intervening space was covered with long rails and poles cut from the brush, and the whole was partially covered with a wheat straw stack."

Paint Tuns Yellow

W. P., writes: "I painted my house green and now it is fading or turning yellow. What is the cause?"

Professor B. B. Robb of the department of agricultural engineering answers: "This is likely to happen with green paint because green is a mixture of yellow and blue; the blue in this paint was probably Prussian blue which is likely to fade when acted on by the light, and thus leaves the yellow.

"As far as I know, nothing can be done to prevent this."

Freeze in Citrus Crop

A farmer inquires what effect the recent freeze in California's citrus crop will have on the sale of New York apples and vegetables.

Professor F. A. Harper of the department of agricultural economics replies: "Estimated losses reduce the total crop of oranges, grapefruit and lemons from 98 million boxes estimated before the freeze to about 84 million boxes, as compared with 78 million boxes a year ago.

"The effect of this reduction on the apple market depends on how much these fruits are substituted for one another. The degree of substitution is uncertain, but there is some competition between California's citrus crop and New York's apple crop.

"What benefit may come to the apple market, however, may be offset by the adverse effects on consumers' income of such things as labor troubles and flood damage.

"The effect of the freeze on vegetables in California is less significant to New York producers and New York holdings than are current events affecting consumer incomes."

EIGHTY-TWO CARS SHIPPED

Value of the carloads of food products and clothing shipped to flood sufferers in the mid-west and south by the New York farm organizations ranged from $850 to $4,500 apiece, with the average around $2,000.

This information is from the last flood bulletin issued by Earl A. Flansbush of the College of Agriculture who served as co-ordinator of farm orfganizations.

In addition, nearly $2,600 was collected in cash and sent to the Red Cross; this does not include money used to purchase foodstuffs.

In all, eighty-two carloads left forty-six counties for the flood zone. Letters expressing appreciation and thanks to New York farm organizations for their help were sent by Carl Grayson, head of the national Red Cross, and Governor Herbert H. Lehman.

Church People Oppose Supreme Court Changes

Congressmen and Senators are being flooded with neatly printed slips, signed by their constituents, demanding "Hands Off the Supreme Court". New Deal investigators soon found that these appeals could not be blamed on the "power trust" or the "economic royalists."

Their investigation disclosed that the "hands off" demands are coming from Christian people spread throughout the length and breadth of the nation. The idea was born of a religious magazine.

By conscience, or otherwise, ex-President Hoover took up the slogan. In his address before the Union League of Chicago, he closed with the watchword, "Hands off the Supreme Court."

New Deal strategists are beginning to realize that the religious forces of the nation are almost a unit against reorganizing the Supreme Court. Episcopal Bishop Manning, Methodist Bishop Waldorf, and several Catholic Bishops, as well as a large number of outstanding clergymen, are already openly on record against the President's plan.

SPORTS ON PARADE

by Leo Bolley

TIME tramps on in the realm of sports. . . . The first automobile race in the United States was held in Chicago on November 28, 1895, and the distance was 54 miles. You motorists who travel so pleasantly and rapidly these days might remember this—the winner had an average speed of 7½ miles per hour! Quite a difference between that clip and the 302 mile an hour record set by Sir Malcolm Campbell on the salt beds of Bonneville, Utah.

The American League was formed in 1900 and during 36 seasons of play the Philadelphia Athletics won the pennant nine times and the New York Yankees eight times. It's odd to note that the St. Louis Browns are still struggling for their first pennant. They might surprise everyone in the near future.

The American Bowling Congress conducted its first national championship in 1901. There were only 115 individuals entered and the prize money was $2,500. This year, in New York, there will probably be 40,000 bowlers and the prize money should total over $100,000. Yes, indeed, time tramps on in sports.

The Kentucky Derby was first run in 1875 with Aristides the winner. And during the generations up to the 62nd running of the classic of all turf classics this year, only one jockey has booted home three winners. He is Earl Sande and the odd part of it is that Sande turned the trick after being told by doctors that he would never ride again.

Professional hockey was established in this country in 1924 when the Bruins acquired a franchise in what had been exclusively a Canadian game. Tex Rickard, the foremost sports impressario of his day, was not interested in the new-fangled game. But what was considered an experiment a dozen years ago is today one of the most profitable and popular sports in the nation.

Back in 1894 there were nearly a score of golf groups and two tournaments were held that season. Today there are nearly 6,000 golf courses in the United States and a tournament is held practically every day in the week the year around. How true the statement — Time tramps on in the realm of sports.

Discontinue Erie Station At Rathbone

Albany, Feb. 25—The Erie Railroad Company has been authorized by the Public Service Commission to discontinue the station at Rathbone, for all purposes except the handling of carload freight.

The Commission's order requires that suitable facilities shall be maintained at Rathbone for inbound and outbound carload shipments of freight and that suitable facilities shall be maintained for inbound and outbound shipments of less-than-carload freight through the agents at Addison and at Cameron Mills. A suitable shelter shall be provided at the site of the Rathbone station for passengers.

There is only one passenger train eastbound stopping at Rathbone daily. Ticket sales decreased from $13.41 in 1933 to $4.06 in 1936. Receipts from freight forwarded in carloads decreased from $4,100.75 in 1934 to $460.90 in 1936. Receipts from carload freight received decreased from $1,298.41 in 1934 to $972.33 in 1936. Receipts from less-than-carload freight forwarded decreased from $59.76 in 1934 and $69.27 in 1935 to $21.04 in 1936. Receipts from less-than-carload freight received increased from $257.17 in 1934 to $289.90 in 1936. The large receipts in 1934 was the result of the shipping of material for highway construction in progress at that time and will not recur. Only about 50 per cent of these receipts accrue to the Erie Railroad.

It was stated that the village of Rathbone has 28 houses and a population of 103 people and that there are 157 people living within a radius of two miles of the station. The railroad company stated that the income derived from maintaining an agency station at Rathbone falls short of the expenses involved; that much of the revenue derived cannot be expected to continue because the work upon which materials shipped was used has been completed and is not likely to recur and that only a portion of the revenue derived goes to the petitioning railroad company.

Those opposed to discontinuing the station argued that the experience of the past four years does not reflect a fair average of business done at the station because floods and other disastrous occurrences have materially reduced the production of the community. It was noted, however, that no one made any representation that they would personally be affected by the absence of an agent at Rathbone. It was concluded that sufficient reason was not given on which to find that public convenience and necessity require continuance of an agent at Rathbone and the petition of the railroad company was granted.

State Teachers, Rochester Mechanics Institute, and Mansfield (Pa.) State Teachers, on the home court before closing the season. Robbins has been playing at center and forward positions.

Good Business Year Predicted for 1937

Official and unofficial reports agree that there is a big upturn in business throughout the country, and that—barring the fear of strikes—the present rise in production and the advance in the country's human and economic affairs will continue into the early summer months. Government prognosticators state that goods of all kinds are in demand. As rents rise there is an increased desire for new home-building.

Small business men are optimistic because there is a period of rising prices. Pessimism looks with wondering, doubting eyes upon the continuation of political efforts to control agriculture, production, the courts and relations between employer and employes. Aside from all the unsettled problems in attempts to make over the United States the indications are that 1937 will meet the expectations of those who are looking for "a good year".

CMTC Seeks Enrollees In This District

Enrollment of 5,130 young men for the Citizens Military Camps is to begin in this district during this week. Boys from New York, New Jersey, Delaware and Puerto Rico will be enrolled in the local camps which will be conducted in Plattsburg, Fort Niagara, Camp Dix, N. J., Madison Barracks, N. Y., Fort Hancock, N. J., and San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The courses are basic red, red, white and blue, denoting first, second, third and fourth year enrollees. Cadets are fed, clothed, sheltered and traveling expenses are paid by the government and at the close of the month's training period there is no obligation to join the army.

Dr. Amos G. Stiker is receiving local applications.

The 30-day period is given over to outdoor sports, hikes, shooting, drills, lessons in citizenship, parades, athletic competition between companies and other entertainment including motion pictures, dances and smokers.

Religious training is in charge of a Protestant, Jewish and Catholic chaplain for each group.

Boy Scouts Have Instruction-Plan Advancement

Instruction in second class Morse signaling was given by John Orr and instruction in tenderfoot knot tieing was given by Lawrence Allen to members of Troop 27 Boy Scouts last Thursday night. Prior to the instruction period a game period was held. Plans were outlined for the patrol contest which is to be held until April. A realignment of the two patrols, Silver Fox and Eagle patrols, will be made before the contest gets under way.

Patrol leaders will be responsible for their patrols in this contest which will include wearing of uniform at meetings, attendance, patrol hikes and meetings outside of regular meetings, conduct at meetings, advancement in rank and merit badge, attendance at church and other Scout activities.

H. Hargrave is patrol leader for the Silver Fox and C. Whitmore is patrol leader for the Eagles. The winning patrol will be ginven an over night trip after the contest closes.

Penalties Promised Drunken Drivers

Albany, Feb. 26—"Law enforcement agencies and courts throughout the state are cracking down on drunken driving", said Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, Charles A. Harnett in a statement today.

The pronouncement followed compilation of statistics in the Motor Vehicle Bureau indicating a sharp increase in the number of revocations and suspensions of drivers' licenses for "Operating while intoxicated" during the month of January.

"Intensive enforcement of the law has been needed to curb the highway's greatest menace — the drunken driver," Commissioner Harnett said. "The increase of the number of suspended and revoked licenses indicates that police officers, both the state constabulary and of the communities throughout the state have renewed their efforts to take into custody any person seen driving while intoxicated. These men, who are sworn to enforce the law, realize the appalling number of lives that have been sacrificed to the incompatible combination of alcohol and gasoline."

"The courts, too, have co-operated in the enforcement of the law against drunken driving. The greatest power at the public's command to establish consciousness of the enormity of this crime, lies in the courts where judges mete out punishments according to the offense committed".

Commissioner Harnett pointed out that reports of convictions on drunken driving and other traffic violations, with the exception of those pertaining to parking regulations, are received by the Bureau of Motor Vehicles.

"Existing laws require that these reports be submitted to the Bureau within 48 hours after the conviction", he said. "This arrangement has been of inestimable value to the Bureau in keeping the records."

Suspensions and revocations of drivers' licenses in New York State last month increased 1,019 over January, 1936.

Last month's total was 3,193 as compared with 2,174 of January, 1936. There were 672 revocations last month, an increase of 295 over the corresponding period of last year. Suspensions jumped to 2,521, compared with last January's figures of 1,797.

Added CCC Men May Swell Roll In Local Camp

The long awaited boom for Addison seems to be on the way, for preparations are being made to move something like 1,500 CCC men in here from other camps to aid in the work on the Tuscarora Creek dam.

Unofficial and unconfirmed rumors state that a group of veterans from camps in the Catskills are coming here. These men are World War veterans and older than the usual run of CCC enrollees. They are completing the projects upon which they have been working for several months, including reforestation projects, soil conservation and flood control work.

The men in these camps have been enlisted mostly from New York state cities. They have the same army discipline that the young men in the present camp are subjected to.

If the group moves in it is expected that an entire new set of barrack buildings will have to be constructed. In cases where large groups are moved in it is expected that the buildings will be of two-story construction rather than the present one-story low type.

The advantages of this building aside from the space saving are several. Including cheaper construction costs, less ground space required and easier to heat.

The moving in of a large group like this will also make changes in the manner of operating the camp, for with this number of men, it will be necessary to set up a different disciplinary program, provide greater health facilities, a greater amount of clerical work will be necessary, store rooms for equipment will have to be provided with the suitable personnel, a camp police system will have to be organized along military lines and in addition there will have to be greater mail facilities, entertainment programs for the men at night, a larger recreation hall and reading room, a different system of sewage and waste disposal in the camp, increased cooking facilities to care for three meals per day.

With this increase it is also expected that civilian cooks will be engaged to release all enrollees for work and provide more expert handling of the foods.

The original plans for Tuscarora dam provided that 3,000 CCC enrollees were to be in this vicinity for construction work on the dam. It has been estimated that the structure would require three years to build and would cost over $2,000,000 before it is completed. This cost would include labor, materials and equipment.

Should this larger group materialize, this will be one of the largest CCC projects in the country and the present time and the expenditure of money by the men in Addison and vicinity would be a big boom to the town and bring Addison back to the days when business was good.

The Rambler

Two of my co-workers have been elected captains of the Triple V in the Methodist Church. And I notice that each has chosen himself a girl for a first lieutenant. Not bad, boys, not bad.

—o—

Why is it that every time a CCC truck load of fellows lands in town there are several of our local young ladies giving them the eye and inviting signs? These enrollees are normal, healthy fellows and enjoy a good time and some do not like the attitudes of some of the local girls. Parents should be warned.

—o—

Ran across this item recently. "There is no profession in the world that would tolerate a member for a day, who knew so little about the task, as does the average parent about rearing children". The writer elaborates by stating there is need for "training for parenthood. The average young person enters marriage and parenthood with an ignorance that is appalling. Training for home life should be part of the early life training of every child, in the home."

—o—

The old Rambler received a complaint last week. It came from some of the boys in the CCC camp. Part of it read like this, "We go out and work like slaves and when we get back we get corned beef that pigs will turn up their noses at owing to the smell. We had it for three days and to top it off have it as hash and the following day beans. The motto of the Engineering and Army personnel is 'more production and less food.' We would like to have more visitors from Addison to see the life the boys lead. As a grand finale, we have what they call cooks, but we call them food destroyers."

—o—

Them's harsh words boys. I'll be up some day for a meal and see what this corned beef is like. Drop me a line again, I like to know what goes on behind the scenes.

—o—

I saw the first load of ice being hauled into the village last week. It came from Goodhue Lake. At the present rate there will surely be none on the river this year.

—o—

Out of the 1,077 motor cars stolen in Pennsylvania during January 597 were those of non-residents of the state. I'm not advising New Yorkers not to go to Pennsylvania, but according to the percentages, your car is more likely to be stolen than a Pennsylvania car.

—o—

A roadside hot dog stand in Maryland displays this sign: "Some Pay Before Due. Some Pay When Due. Some Pay When Past Due. Some never do. How Do You Do?"

—o—

The United States has been under the present Constitution since 1789. And since that time 3,148 proposals have been made to amend this famous document. At the 100-year mark a total of 1,300 proposals had been made. During the past 100 years 522 proposals have been made to affect the supreme court.

—o—

Do you smoke Sore Throat cigarettes because Lady Murgratroyd does? Do you drive a Sexon Six because some good looking socialite drives one? Do you use tar and honey cold cream because Mrs. Astorbilt does? Well, according to a large volume of advertising, you should. And when public servants make a racket of endorsing products, I say we should boycott that product and public servant. No wonder people lose faith in advertising when advertising agencies which should know better, sponsor such activities.

—o—

The people who are always going to advertise at some future time, but never do, are likely to find that the crowd was always going to come around to see their goods but never got around to it. (Pardon the plug for the company).

—o—

News items and advertisements for this paper may be inserted by calling 58-R.

—o—

One home economics teacher in Syracuse University insists that her graduates insist on an income of $2,000 from the man they marry. Pretty high for a graduate to expect right away when the Young Married Couples' Club of Philadelphia states a happy marriage is possible on $22 a week. Theory versus practice again.

—o—

It begins to look as though there would be no ice on the river for the farmers to cut this year.

—o—

And can anyone in the vicinity remember a February when there was as little snow as there was last month. The Rambler does not remember, and he has seen a few winters in his day.

—o—

One of the staff members bought a house several years ago and and thought it was number 77. So when neighbors moved in he gave them what he thought was their house numbers. His wife purchased nice, new, shiney numbers to put on the house last week and imagine her embarrasment when she discovered the 77 on a house two doors down the street. Just a problem about numbering our houses here.

—o—

That's all.

Canisteo Host to Steuben Dairymen

Many subjects of importance to the industry will be discussed at the Fourth Annual Steuben County Dairymen's Convention which will be held at Canisteo on March 9, 10 according to the announcement of Burton Ketch, chairman of the farm bureau dairy committee.

One of the feature speakers of the occasion is Dr. James Brew of the American Jersey Cattle Club, who will discuss sanitary regulations as they apply to public health, and also in regard to the cost to the farmer. Mr. Brew was for many years a bacteriologist with the Dairy Department at Cornell University, was later a member of the staff of the New York State Board of Health.

Speaker At Dairymen's Meet

New phases of milk marketing will be presented by Dr. M. C. Bond of the College of Agricultude. Professor E. S. Harrison will discuss the relationship between type and production. Mr. Harrison is well qualified to speak on this subject, as under his administration the Cornell herd has made outstanding production records, and has done well in the show ring.

The seed situation, especially as regards clover and alfalfa, will be discussed by Dr. E. P. Bussell. Mr. Bussell will explain how to identify important seed, and will discuss the production of high protein feed crops. The subject of beef cattle production on New York state farms has been assigned to R. B. Hinman, Secretary of the Aberdeen-Angus Association of the northeastern states.

Paul Korb, agricultural agent of Tioga County, Pa., will discuss the use of records in the development of the dairy program. Mr. Korb has had outstanding success in his twenty years of service in Tioga County, and his address on this subject will be of interest to the nearly 200 dairymen of Steuben county who are keeping production records on their herds through the service offered by the farm bureau.

The meeting will be held in the Canisteo Grange Hall, the sessions begin each day at 10:30 and the program will be concluded at 3 P. M. Dinner will be served by the Grange. All Steuben County farmers are invited to attend.

Steuben Potato Convention Breaks Attendance Record

Breaking all attendance records, with a larger show than ever before, and presenting a program that included everything from the weather to an analysis of federal legislation affecting agriculture, the Tenth Annual Steuben County Potato Growers' Convention held at Cohocton Thursday and Friday of last week, was proclaimed a success by its sponsors, the potato committee of the farm bureau.

In the Green Mountain division, Harry Shaver of Wayland won first place; Glenn Graves of Ingleside, second; George Mehlenbacher, Wayland, third; Charles Gates, Arkport, fourth; and Leon Mehlenbacher, Wayland, fifth.

The entry of Clarence Shaver of Wayland won first place in the Smooth Rural Class east of the Conhocton River; Lou Roloson, Prattsburg, second; L. E. Drake, Prattsburg, third; Richard Schwingle, Atlanta fourth; Wendell Schwingle, Atlanta, fifth.

Winners in Class C for Smooth Rurals west of the Conhocton River were Frank Wagar, Cohocton; R. M. Stone, Cohocton; Fred Gessner, Fremont; Bennett Gessner, Fremont; Aden Ingalls, Fremont.

The Potato Convention, a feature of the program of the Steuben County Farm Bureau, is held each year for the purpose of bringing together the growers of the region to consider matters of interest to the industry and to give the latest information on production and marketing problems.

County Farmers Meet March 5 to Study Horses

A county-wide horse meeting is announced by the farm bureau to be held Friday, March 5, on the farm of C. H. Willis of Howard.

Earl Hanson, horse expert of the College of Agriculture, will be the speaker. Mr. Hansen will discuss defects and unsoundness, and how they can be determined, the care of the mare in foal and similar subjects.

A feature of the meeting will be the judging of a ring of horses and a demonstration of how to select sound horses. The meeting begins at 1:30. All interested are invited to attend.

Grangers Discuss School Centralization

Plans for the Pomona sessions to be held in this village were made at a meeting of the local Grange held Friday night. The program was in charge of Lecturer Mrs. Sheldon Stewart. The men voted to spend Tuesday cleaning the old gymnasium where sessions of the Pomona Grange will be held. Mrs. Elroy Hannahs and Mrs. Frank Little were appointed a committee on housing to arrange for sleeping places for delegates should any desire to stay overnight.

A discussion of "Centralization of Schools" was opened by the lecturer. Speakers on the topic were: Mrs Jennie Mose, teacher in the rural districts, Francis Kane, Henry Sherwood, Miss Leanore Runyan, Earl Beatty, Frank Little and Kenneth Armstrong. No conclusions were reached on the subject.

District Director To Aid Income Taxpayers

Rochester, N. Y., Mar. 1—James Mangan, District Director for the State Department of Taxation and Finance, announced today the assignment of auditors to aid income taxpayers of the Rochester area in the preparation of their returns.

Taxpayers who are now engaged with their federal income tax returns due March 15 were warned that their state income tax is due on or before April 15.

Rates for the state income tax are the same as last year. They are 2% on the first thousand dollars of net income; 3% on the second and third thousand; 4% on the fourth and fifth thousand; 5% on the sixth and seventh thousand; 6% on the eighth and ninth thousand and 7% on all amounts over $9,000. In addition to these normal rates the 1% emergency tax is again applicable.

Exemptions continue at $1,000 for single persons and $2,500 for married persons. One-half of the normal tax and all of the emergency tax must be paid on or before April 15. Of the remainder, one-quarter of the normal tax is payable on or before June 15 and the final one-quarter on or before October 15.

Jacob Fritz will be at the Chamber of Commerce, Corning, to assist income taxpapers on April 1 to 3 inclusive, and at the Association of Commerce, Elmira, on April 5 to 15 inclusive.

Consumer Shares In World Fair

The 1939 New York World's Fair plans to show progress of the past; tools of the present; and ways men can build a better world tomorrow, Mrs. Blanche W. Hendrickson of the New York state federation of Women's clubs told a Farm and Home Week audience.

The consumer will have a big share of the attention, Mrs. Hendrickson said. Through an Advisory Committee on consumers' interests, of which she is chairman, questions such as "What do consumers want?" "What is the best to buy?" will be featured. The committee also plans to conduct a consumers' "taste survey" at the Fair to try to find a sound and permanent solution for consumers' problems.

"The first problem in wise buying is to know what you want. This means to decide the article's use; how much wear can be expected from it; and how much care it will need. In considering an addition to the wardrobe, for example, the first thing is to learn the condition of present clothes and what color predominates. Next, consider the suitability of the clothes to your activities, such as church affairs, club meetings, or business, and also standards set by the community or friends. Finally, the amount of money, time and skill you have helps to decide whether to buy ready-made clothes or to make your own".

Mrs. Perry Speaks In AHS - FFA To Play High Friday

Mrs. Willis R. Perry, librarian in the Addison Public Library, was the speaker at the Assembly period held in the Addison High School Friday morning. Mrs. Perry was presented to the students by Miss Betty Pepper, acting for the Library Club of the school, sponsors of the program.

Mrs. Perry spoke on the various types of books in the library from fiction, through biography, autobiography and poetry, for which she expressed a fondness, and proved it by reciting quotations from Tony Won's Scrap Book. She spoke of the life of "The Invincible Louisa", May Alcott biography, of Russia, the biography of Emerson, 20 years of life on the sea by J. P. Williamson, a diver.

The speaker closed with recitations and readings from Wons, Edna St. Vincent Millet and others. The program closed with a skit on proper behavior in the library.

The program this week will be sponsored by the Future Farmers and the High School Athletic Association. There will be a basketball game between Coach Frank Finnerty's FFA five and Coach Wendell Hewson's five. This is an annual affair and a great deal of rivalry is expected.

Mr. and Mrs. Mel Woodward called on their daughter, Mrs. Glen Calkins one day last week.

Mr .and Mrs. Orrie Niles, Mrs. Emma Niles and Pierce Kells spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Orson E. Lent.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Groves attended Grange in Borden recently.

Mr. and Mrs. V. Vidigson and family were shopping in Hornell Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Krise of Borden and Mr. and Mrs. Glen Rogers and daughter Florence were recent callers at the home of Hugh Hilborn.

Linsford Calkins accompanied his class at Addison High to Ithaca to attend the Farm and Home Week program, one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Harley House and son Otto of Almond called on relatives and friends here Monday.

Hunting Popular Among Sportsmen

Hunters have increased 400 per cent in number since the world war, and wild life management has become "big business", was the statement of F. C. Edminister, of the New York State Conservation Department, to the Farm and Home Week visitors at Ithaca.

In New York alone, he said, the cash value of meat and pelts from the wild life harvest amounts to about $5,000,000 a year. Spendings by sportsmen for clothing, firearms, gasoline and guides are estimated at nearly $50,000,000 a year in the state.

"Such a valuable resource deserves adequate conservation, and conservation means wise use thru management.

"The great need is for a better understanding and closer cooperation between landowners and sportsmen. The greatest part of the responsibility is up to the sportsmen, but the farmers too can help. The more sportsmen who are members of farm organizations and farmers who are members of sportsmen's clubs, the lower will be the property loss suffered and the greater the recreation obtained."

Posting a farm generally keeps off the true sportsman, and not the destructive violator, the speaker said. He suggested that the presence of good sportsmen on the farm might be the best possible check on destructive tendencies of the minority.

Industrial Executive Praises Scouting

Percy L. Dunn, Scout executive for the Steuben Area Council, has sent a communication to editors of weekly newspapers in the area telling them of an industrial executive's reaction to Scouting. This executive, in the district, engages hundreds of men and states that he will engage an Eagle Scout without references or recommendation, providing he has other qualifications for the position sought.

The executive said, "An Eagle Scout is loyal and he has character, morality and integrity by virtue of his training and is courteous for he can take orders without complaint.

Joe E. Brown at Avon Sunday and Monday In "Sons O' Gun"

"Sons O' Guns," Joe E. Brown's lasest Warner Bros. comedy frolic, based on the hilarious Broadway musical hit by Fred Thompson and Jack Donahue, opens at the Avon Theatre Sunday.

Besides the mirth stirring antics of the wide mouthed comedian, the picture is spiced with the famous martial airs of the original stage play, with tuneful new songs by Harry Warren and Al Dubin, sung by Joe E., Joan Blondell, Winifred Shaw and the Chambers Male Chorus, and riotous dance numbers, all staged by the famous musical comedy producer, Bobby Connolly.

The story is a rollicking comedy romance dealing with the humorous side of doughboy life in France during the World War. The picture is said to be most colorful and picturesque, and lavish in production values, staged with more elaborateness than any previous Joe E. Brown comedy.

Between his distaste for army discipline and enemy shells on the one hand and his timorous adventures with three jealous and aggressive sweethearts on the other, Joe finds that life is just one horrible nightmare after another, much to the amusement, it is said, of the spectator.

As the much heckled buck private he is finally arrested as a spy and is about to be placed before a firing squad when a surprising turn of events makes him the hero of the hour, with his love troubles all untangled.

Miss Blondell, Miss Shaw and Beverly Roberts are Joe's three war-time sweethearts while others in the cast include Eric Blore, Craig Reynolds, Joseph King, Robert Barrat, G. P. Huntley, Jr. and Frank Mitchell.

Lloyd Bacon directed the picture from the screen play by Jerry Wald and Julius J. Epstein.

Addison Ministers At Corning Meeting

The Rev. Garland G. Lacey, the Rev. John V. Axtell and the Rev. Kenneth E. Arnold of the local churches were in Corning Monday attending a meeting of the Ministers' Association of Corning and vicinity. There were 22 members of the clergy at the session. Discussion was devoted to the relation of the minister in the marriage ceremony. This is one of a series of such meetings held at which problems confronting ministers are discussed.

Mrs. Bert Smith

One week after the death of her mother, Mrs. Anna M. Hammond, Mrs. Bert Smith, 57, town of Tuscarora, died in the Corning Hospital after an illness of a few weeks. Death was caused by pneumonia.

Mrs. Hammond had been living with Mrs. Smith but left there two weeks ago to avoid the influenza and caught it, dying within one week. Mrs. Smith had been ill but not critically enough to require hospital care until Tuesday. She died early Wednesday morning, March 3.

She leaves five children: Mrs. Owen Cass, this village, Theodore Clellan, Leland and Mrs. Paul Powers.

Mrs. John Hammond

Mrs. Anna Mary Hammond, who died last week at the home of Mrs. Bert Smith, was born in Sussex County, N. J., March 5, 1849. She came to live in Rathbone when her parents moved here in 1853 and had lived in Steuben County since that time. Her parents were the late Mary Ann Merring and James Moore.

In 1874 she became the bride of Jacob Andrus in Woodhull. Of this union two children were born. Mr. Andrus died 30 years ago and 27 years ago the deceased became the bride of John Hammond of Austinburg, Pa. His death occurred several years ago.

Mrs. Hammond leaves a daughter, Mrs. Bert Smith and the following grandchildren: Theodore, Clillan and Leland Smith, Mrs. Paul Powers and Mrs. Owen Cass and also two great-grandchildren. Bearers at the funeral were Leland Smith, Owen Cass, Paul Powers, Ben Dickson, Theodore Smith and George Andrus.
